The Presidency.

It is palpable to the most superficial observer that Gen. TAYLOR is every day gaining ground. The people, the masses, have all along been with and for him; but the chief difficulty has been to persuade the leaders that the single-handed and stalwart veteran of Buena Vista had a firmer hold on the popular affections than even the most fit, wise and distinguished statesmen of the day. But the evidence is now ... The feeling ... manifested. Wherever the name of ZACHARY TAYLOR is mentioned, the ... of the people is excited to enthusiasm to ... And there can be no more valid test ... than ... of Gen. TAYLOR's influence and strength ... to the fact that in the very house of ... the sage of Ashland, a movement of freeing ... to assert ... quarter we may, and it will be ... that Old Rough and Ready is approaching ... with a ... the Whig fidelity. Every day ... every ... day increases the chances ... nation. We think we see that we ... before the Nation ... Mr. Clay ... we ... Taylor ... we ... as he ... Mr. Clay himself or from ... of his more confidential friends; but from the unqualified manner in which he makes the statement, and from some other circumstances ... in connection with his statement, we are inclined to the belief that he obtained his information from Mr. Clay himself. This, however, is a surmise of our own.

MR. CLAY AND GEN. TAYLOR.—At Frankfort, Ky., there have lately been held a Whig State Convention, and a Taylor Convention. A letter in the Louisville Journal, in allusion to them says:

It was generally understood in the Whig State Convention, from declarations by the friends of Mr. Clay, that he will not allow his name to be used as a candidate for the Presidency—that he will in a short time formally announce this determination; and the convention therefore very properly, from motives of delicacy to him, forbore to nominate Gen. Taylor. The delegates appointed to the Philadelphia National convention are with one exception, understood to be warm friends of Gen. Taylor's nomination by that convention.

The separate Taylor convention adjourned after having nominated Gen. Taylor, and appointed delegates to Philadelphia. The same delegates are appointed by both Conventions.

GEN. TAYLOR IN NEW JERSEY.—A New Jersey correspondent of the New York Mirror writes to that paper as follows:

"I can assure you Mr. Editor, that almost every prominent and independent citizen, and the great mass of the people of New Jersey, are in favor of Gen. Taylor. There are some men in both parties whose sole importance depends upon their being members of a Clay or Cass committee, and who, having some claim or hope for office from one or other of these candidates, make a great commotion. Their influence is, on account, while Gov. Pennington, himself of his caliber, on the Whig side, and Gov. Vroom, and many influential gentlemen, on the other side, are in out for Old Rough and Ready.

☞ An extract from a letter from a Boston gentleman now in Paris, announces the election of Mr. Bancroft, as a corresponding member of the French Institute, the highest honor which can be bestowed in France upon a foreigner. Mr. Prescott is already a member, thus making two Americans in a class of history consisting of seven members, selected from the world at large.

NEW YORK IMPORTS.—The imports entered at the New York customhouse, the past week, amounted to $2,417,795. The specie received amounted to $9,680, and that imported to $122,130, in Sovereigns, to Liverpool. The total of specie shipped since 1st January last, is $1 921,221.

☞ The N. Y. Courier learns from a source that admits of no question, that at the time of the Hoosac tunnel swamp, the basis of a treaty between Great Britain and the United States had been agreed upon, which would place the Post Office arrangements between the two countries on terms of perfect reciprocity."

Resolutions are now before the Virginia Legislature to the effect that the law passed at the last session of Congress, imposing a tax of three cents upon transient newspapers conveyed through the U. S. mails, and requiring prepayment, was calculated to obstruct the circulation among the people, and ought to be repealed, &c.

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.—A despatch received in Charleston, and dated Baltimore, 26th February, 12 M., states that the New York Cotton market is firm, and that Flour is manufacturing. The Baltimore and Philadelphia markets for breadstuffs are steady.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that Joseph H. Stokes, Esq., an Attorney at Law, of Dalton, Geo., was instantly killed at Kingston, on the Western and Atlantic Railroad, on Saturday evening the 19th by attempting to enter the passenger train while it was in motion. After jumping on the train his foot slipped, and he was caught between the cars and platform, and crushed to death in an instant.

SINGULAR DEATH.—Miss Elizabeth Vance, 40 years of age, of Prince street, in Boston, was strangled to death on Tuesday evening, by a piece of meat, which lodged in her throat while eating.

☞ By the St. Joseph's Gazette, we observe that emigrants for Oregon and California, are assembling at that point, preparatory to taking up their line of march in the spring for the Pacific.

VETERANS DISCHARGED.—Kendall or Cassell Cook, pronounced by competent judges superior to the best English cook of the same description, has been found in the valley of the Kenawha river, Virginia.

☞ It may be mentioned as a singular fact that no native of a large city has ever filled the Executive chair of the Union.

METEOR.—A splendid meteor passed over New Haven about ten days ago, attracting universal attention.

GOV. SHUNK.—The Harrisburg Union says Gov. Shunk is rapidly recovering from his late attack of illness.

SUCCESSFUL THIEF.—A clergyman of Boston, the owner of eligible real estate held at $16,000, was "diddled" out of it last week by three o'clock a Frenchman, named Pierre Barois fell accidentally in the river and was drowned. The unfortunate man wanted to go over the river, and took a skiff which was opposite the tower Cotton Press, when he missed his footing and fell in the water. The deceased came to the city about a month ago; he leaves a wife and two children in St. Louis.

THE DOG'S CASE.—This celebrated case came up yesterday before Recorder Seuseneau for examination. It will be recollected that the dog was caused to be arrested for biting on the ear a little girl. His Honor, after a careful investigation of the case, told to the mother of the young girl, that she must go before a justice of the peace, and claim damages from the owner of the dog; that his Court had not jurisdiction in the matter.

☞ An execution was yesterday issued in the First District Court, against Madame Josephine Weisse, the lady manager of the "Varsonne Children," for $216.75, in favor of Madame Tilton, who has boarded the party of dancseuses.

☞ The Board of Directors of the 1st Municipality Public Schools, met last evening, and elected M. C. Dague, as French and Latin teacher of the high schools of the 1st Municipality.

☞ A free man of color, residing on Main street, in the 1st Municipality, died day before yesterday, at the advanced age of 105 years.

Macready's Methodical Madness.

Macready, whose peculiarities all playgoers remember, was playing an engagement at one of the London theatres. Mrs. Sloman, at that period, was the principal actress at the theatre, between whom and Macready a mortal enmity existed. A new play, the name of which we have forgotten, was produced, in the last scene of which Macready, as he was a madman. He was always very violent in this scene, carrying his rudeness so far as to seize Mrs. Sloman by the hair and drag her up the stage, regardless of her shrieks.

The lady of course complained of this conduct, and received from the "creature"—"the only saloon"—the answer that if fact he "did not know what he was doing"—having become wholly identified with the character, he was "no longer Mr. Macready, but the hero himself"—Mrs. Sloman became enraged and left the theatre.

Mrs. Keen, then Miss Ellen Tree, was engaged to fill her place, and enact the heroine of the new Greek play. Mrs. Sloman took care that Miss Tree should be informed of the fate that awaited her, and in piteous tones related the unmanly conduct of Macready. "Oh! I'll match him," exclaimed the fair actress—"only let him try it"—and she smiled as she only can smile.

The next morning a rehearsal of the new play was called, and all went on smoothly until the mad Macready arrived. Macready then came forward, and, with a low bow remarked in his peculiar way, "A-a-Mis-s Tree, I-m-s-y-o-u-r-s m-i-n-e-a scene—I beg-a-n-y-o-u-r-e-x-c-u-s-e."

"Oh! ah! yes, Mr. Macready," replied the actress, "certainly! but, Mr. Macready, I do my hair up with pins—at least a hundred, Mr. Macready—and was I to let it—not touch it—or you may scratch your fingers."

Mr. Macready said nothing more about losing his personality. He carefully preserved it during the engagement, and abstained from meddling with the hair of the actress.

It is unnecessary to say any thing further, we imagine, on the subject.

A WINDFALL.—The Hagerstown News states that Hezekiah Bullards, an old man who lately died in Baltimore, how left all his property, valued at $12,000, to a young lady, a school-mistress of that town, who, when the old gentleman visited Hagerstown a year ago, treated him with great kindness, when others, viewing him as beneath their notice, in consequence of his shabby appearance, treated him with great coldness. The lady not only gave him a warm welcome, but also introduced into her school the "Monotonical Speller," a work of which the deceased was the author. "Kind words cost nothing."—Baltimore Clipper.

Oats have declined to 40@42c ℔ bushel, with moderate transactions.

CONSECRATED
St. James Sugar Refinery,
February 7, 1848.

MR. W. E. THOMPSON,

SIR—In reading a printed circular, sanded to me by Mr. Valcour Aime, I was surprised to see my name in connection with a trial that was made at Mr. Armant's, at the 5th January.

The truth of the matter is this:—I went to Mr. Armant's at the request of Mr. Valcour Aime, and measured four cordsof wood. You must bear in mind that said wood was packed, all the crooked and refuse being put in the middle. After the shipping of Sugar was drawn, there remained no syrup to proceed with; the consequence was, we had to boil the syrup cane for fully two hours before we had syrup to commence with. We then began firing with the measured wood, and for the first two hours consumed as near as possible, two cords of wood, and the fireman let the steam go down so that I, myself, assisted at the machinery, another fireman was procured, and it being three days, I went into the Sugar house, and remained until the shipping was drawn, which occupied three and a half hours, which the Refiner said would fill sixty moulds. I then examined the fire wood, and found to my surprise, that only a half cord of wood had been consumed during the last hour and a half. Now, we must either suppose that the difference of the fireman was the cause of burning so little fuel; during the last hour and a half, or that there was under-hand work going on. I, at once, concluded that the fireman had used the unmeasured wood during my absence, and I became disgusted with the whole proceedings. I then proposed to try another shipping, but was informed that there was not sufficient syrup to proceed with, nor would not be before the next morning.

I should like Mr. Armant's Engineer to state the reason why there was no syrup to proceed with, when the first shipping was drawn, and also the reason there was not sufficient, when the last shipping was drawn, to proceed without you will perceive by my statement, that the syrup pans had boiled two hours ahead of the granulating pan. I concluded, the steam had been all turned on to the granulating pan, and therefore no syrup could be made.

I had no intention of making public, the jugglery that was attempted to be practised upon me, if it had not appeared to me that you were bolstering the apparatus by means which I consider it my duty to expose.

I will now state my opinion on the subject. First, the rolling mill never went with less than half a cord of wood. Second, it takes half a cord to defiecate the juice, and Third, it must have some steam to boil the first pan, which I set down at half a cord of wood. That is to say, for rolling mill, half a cord, for defiecation, half a cord, for boiling first pan, half a cord, which makes one and a half cord, the quantity consumed by Valcour Aime's apparatus, called by N. Rillieux, Des grands. I wish here to ask what part of the apparatus made by Messrs. Merrick & Town, does N Rillieux claim as his apparatus—as the filters then used are Degrandes, the diffectators are Desornes, and using the steam of one pan to boil another, is also Desornés.

I do not know how much sugar Mr Armant's apparatus is capable of making; but, it is, I do know, that they made no more in the same time than did that of Mr. Valcour Aime, that is from the commencement of the grinding season until the finishing.

I remain, you obedient servant.

J. KING, Engineer,
at Valcour Aime's, Esq.
