Reports from the Departments.

The National Intelligencer of the 29th ult., a day's issue, contains, besides the President's Message, the complete reports from the Secretaries of the Treasury, the War Department, Navy Department, Post Office, and Interior Department. We begin with a condensed abstract of the Treasury Report.

The total estimated receipts for the fiscal year ending on the 30th June, 1851, are $35,500,000; the expenditures during the same period are $41,907,092 73. Thus deficit, added to that of the present fiscal year, embraces the sum of $13,575,211 39.

There are three custom districts in the United States, which number 19 are maintained at the public expense, as do not collect revenue enough to defray their expenses, and in 56 only does the gross revenue exceed the expenses.

The public debt amounts to $59,201,053 71—

This has been created entirely by the extraordinary disbursements required by the Mexican war. The report proceeds to point out the manifold resources of the government, and to prove that the Mexican indemnity does not endanger the specific provided for the United States. To prove for the deficit of 16 millions, the Secretary proceeds to the publication of a series of tables on the amount by the states from the organization of the Treasury to the present time, on specific duties, on articles on which they exist, on the countries on which they exist, on the countries from which they are imported, on the quantities entered for consumption, on the quantities withdrawn from warehouse, on the quantities remaining in warehouse, on the quantities exported, on the quantities remaining in warehouse, on the quantities exported, on the quantities remaining in warehouse, on the quantities exported
