BELIE, with the famous Panorams of Italy, painted by Warcus, and the Italian Femocress. They will be exhibited in our city, beginning on Monday evening next, at Armsory Hall. The Golumbus (Ga.) Inquirer, speaking of this beautiful panorams, says:

Some of the scenes are so life-like that one almost fancise himself gazing on the reality instead of the counteriest presentment. The Colosseum of Rome is decidedly the best executed picture we have ever seen, and appears to stand out from the canvas as a real building of stone, instead of paint and oanvas. The windows and doors are perfect in their representations, and the eye can penetrate into the very interior of the building. St. Peter's church in Rome is also a splendid representation, and the illumination scene is show of Naples, the eruption of Vesuvius, Lake Como, and in fact all the somery representation is no beautiful and Romanic, and faithful measted with such interest by the elequent lecturer of different somes by the elequent lecturer of the strong of an and the symmetric pleasantly and profitably than by going to witness the exhibition.
