

The New Orleans Bee.

OFFICE 73 CHARTRES STREET.

NEW ORLEANS, TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 30, 1870.

482 YEAR-Vol. XLIII—Whole—16,160

WAR NEWS.

(From the New Orleans Bee.)

BY TELEGRAPH.

(To the New Orleans Bee.)

The Franco-Prussian War.

The Expulsion of All Germans Demanded by the French Journal.

The Prussian March on Paris.

The Minister of Commerce Collecting Supplies for the Siege.

A Republican Conspiracy Discovered in South Germany.

Strasburg and Metz Hold Out.

The Prussians Making a Flank Movement on MacMahon.

Parisians' Belief of the Fate of the Prussians.

Opinion of M. Thiers on the Capture of Paris.

Reported Commencement of a Great Battle.

Fight Between French and German Citizens at Lisbon.

Movements of the Prussian Army.

Prince Royal's Army Going Toward Snipper.

Sixty Thousand Reinforcements for McMahons.

Miscellaneous.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

(From the New Orleans Bee.)

Paris, Aug. 29.—Bois de Boulogne is quiet.

The Times says: "Six days will be needed for the Prussians to reach Paris; their march will be slow, and they will arrive in time to capture the city before the battle of Metz." The Times also says: "The Germans are concentrating at Soummer, between Stenay and Verdun, last night, between Stenay and Verdun, and the gates and posts have been charred, and the fortifications are formidable." The principal of the school of Government to Lyons has been suggested.

Paris, Aug. 29.—The Duke of Orléans has been appointed to command the forces sent to the South of France.

Sixty thousand of these veterans under the Duke of Savoie will form the reserves to the army of the king.

The Duke of Orléans has been reinforced by another division, and will be ready to march on Paris.

No German expected.

Paris, Aug. 29.—The Constitution has been exploded, and the Germans have begun fighting at Metz. At the beginning of the war they were peaceful, but all restriction was removed, and those who did so of their own accord have been compelled to fight.

Paris, Aug. 29.—The Duke of Orléans has been appointed to command the forces sent to the South of France.

King William telegraphed on Monday evening that he had been informed of his command, but the result proved that his judgment was correct. For every man he lost he gained the Prussian government, and the Duke of Orléans, who had a considerable force at his disposal, did not intend to attack the Duke of Orléans, who respects no truce or truce.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

These terrible battles were fought, it is said, because the French had been beaten, and because they retreated, but without fighting, in their retreat, the army of the king and of Prince Carl had been reinforced by men, instead of being taken prisoner.

The fortifications of Metz, instead of being traps for the French army, as the Prussians and their American sympathizers now believed, have proven to be the best defense of the French capital.

The strategy of Bismarck has been perfect.

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?

He kept his arm at Metz, prepared to prevent the victorious legions of the Prussians from marching upon Paris, and the French army from retreating, as he had without exception, to Montebello and Metz.

General Paixhans' Removal.

Was it not better to let MacMahon have what he wanted?