The American Question.

The Confederate loan and prospective of a Confederate loan and prospective of a Confederate mark in Ergclane.

Querations, March 19, 1863—The London Times city article says the autouncement of the loan has caused an unusual amount of attention. The last quotations yesterday was 23 to 3 premium. The affair is to be regarded almost exclusively as a cotton speculation. The dayres of favor recorded to it in Liverpool, Mauchester, Havre and other centres of the cotton trade must constitute the test by which Ludon operators will be likely to be influenced Shundl cotton remain at la. 91, a large number of persons will probably be supposed to run the great risk of getting it out.

The general question will, however, be as to the price likely to precall for cotton after the conclusion of peace, and that is a matter for the judgment of Laucachire Six months are allowed as the period during which such holder of the bonds will have the option, after the ratification of peace, of changing them for cotton, and there who subserve will day in the belief that the average throughout that interval will be at all peace per bound. Every other mode security offered and the consequent prospect or profit.

The reasoning that would exclude the South-from a boan on account of the conduct of Mirasy-sippi would upply to the North, since the North-miraces Michagan. The Washington politi-cians will doubtless itsett upon looking as this ison as an outrasyous blow deliberately aimed against them by the European aristocrady, and though they will be cusclous that if they could sately do so they would publicly enter into a similar transaction themselves, and that they have already so lar set the example that 20,030 bales of cutton are alleged by their own jun-tuals to have havely found their way to the New Section of the contraction of the contraction of the New Section of the contraction of the section of the New Section of the contraction of the section of the New Section of the Secti
