He is a native of North Carolina, and was educated at the bar in Penn sylvania, where he pursued his legal studies with diffigence and success. While yet a young man he emigrated to Tennessee, where his learning and accuracy in his profession, especially in the doctrines of real property, and the soundness of his judgement, soon procured him a high re pentation and ext in ive pra t ce. When Teanessee was crected into a separate state, he became a member of the legislature, and was afterwards elected a Judge of the Supreme Court of that time when the Bench was graced by the learned and ingenious Judge Hayward, one of the ablest this situation he became as conspicuous for the impariality and soundness of his opinions as he base. It is stated that the Emperor and western states and territories were threatened with endan invasion, Judge White was in the field as a volunteer, and on this occasion it was received with enthusiasm by the inhabitans. His that he half the foundation of that extensive on ney through the empire was not, however, knowledge of Indian affairs which he has since various some evidences of insectisfaction remone displayed in Congress. On inquiry, the authors, to his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constanting, whether he had not an .1merican in his army, he said he would naroduce me to him. When one of the divisions had marched past, he called out in a loud tone. something in Russan, upon which a very fine looking young man dropped to the rear and came up to us. It was amasing to see this young genticuem, bora in a land of freedom rigged out in a Russian uniform, and approaching with the awkward and stiff goit of a Russial soldier. His name was Monroe. By the late accounts I perceive an ail de camp of that name mentioned; this must be the same gentleman.

We were gratified on Wednesday last, by viewing a salt cellar, made of Schnyikill coal. The polish was nearly equal to that generally given to black sealing wax, and the shape quite andern. The infinity of advantages peculiar to this valuable numeral, are beyond forestalit or calculation. We relieve that solid blocks of an thracke can resist the severity of any chemic; and we should not be very much a somished, that such should be made use of ere long, by our enterprising fellow citizens of consvide, in the rection of a house! If a polish could be give to the faces of clothes at a moderate expense, we think a most beautiful and certainly unique edilice might be erected. But perlings, some wag, would suggest the erection of a subterrance. temple, to be, dedicated to Pinto.

great symmetry of proportion. I accompanied a German merchant, at Raffa. in the Crimea, to the mart of slaves, where the Armenian had exposed for sale two Circussian girls of the most exquisite loveliness. We feigned an intention of purchasing them, in order to gratify our curiosity, and ascertain the mode of conducting these inhuman sales. The maidens were introduced to us one after another. Their deportment was graceful and modest to diffidence. The first girl presented was in her fourteenth year: she was elegantly dressed; her ace was covered with a veil, brough which her blue eyes, as well as neck and shoulders that ivalled the pariat marble in whiten as, shone like stars piercing a black cloud. She advance ed towards the German, bowed down, and kis sed his hand; then, at the command of her master, she walked backwards and forwards in the tent to show her fine shape, and the easiness of her carriage; she again raised her robe, some to show the deheacy of a leg and foot thatwould have charmed at Praxitels. When she took off her veil, our eyes were dezzled with a dimpled tace, in which the bity and the rose were blend ed on the checks of blooming youthfulness. Her de was at once noble and modest; her gestures animating and dignified. Her tresses as black is elony, fell carelessly over her levely breast, and when she so fled, she discovered teeth of a pearly waiteness and enamel.

She rubbed her checks with a wet napkingt prove that she had not used art to improve o height in the block of her complex on.
