Louisiana Institution,

Directed by R. PEDARRE, Bachelor of Arts and Sciences, No. 71 Rampart street between Bienville and Conti streets.

THE Principal respectfully announces to fathers of families, that the system of studies which he has hereafter been so fortunate to applying, having been warmly approved by his fellow citizens and other persons of greater respectability and worth, he will be pursued with all the solicitude and perseverance to be expected from one who is firmly convinced that he sees thereof progress, pupils and that the determination tends to the advantage of youth, for whose welfare all his services are directed.

A resident of this city for eleven years occupied in giving public and private lessons, R. Pedarre, has effected to know the wants of Louisiana. He assumes not forgotten that no cure is supposed but only of legists and orators, but in a large proportion of merchants, mechanics, engineers, the offspring of the wealth and glory of this astonishing republic. For true great economy, then, it ought to be the end of instruction to form men who do not cost to be a burthen, should be enlightened, laborious and active Morality being the only foundation of a good education, the first duty, doubtless, of him who devotes himself to instruction, should begin at the commencement to impress the minds of his pupils with correct principles
