General Gaines and the Union. Hard upon the extraordinary order from the nent requiring General Taylor to offer licers who were enrolled for six months or les the choice of serving one year or being discharged, appear a most severe and malignant assult upon Gen?. Canses by the Washington Union. That paper of the 5th inst., devotes a column to berating the veteran patriot in approved official style. Gen'il Gartis is vehemently censure, because he acted with alacrity, zeal and the most artent patriotism—because to use the language of Senator Sevens, "he meet the crisis and met it like a man"—because his sagacity his military.

a scape-goat and is to bear the sine of Mr. Manor's imbecility, ignorance and petty tyranny. The United prepares in or this consummation by declaring in the very outset, that the extraordinary' and anauthorized iduct of Gen'l. GAINES" will involve the country in

The latter portion contains matter still more significant—witness the following pregnant persgraph:—
"General Gaines is an old soldier who has done in former years, good service; it is very desirable in should repuse in quietness upon his laurels. However unregulated his conduct, few—very few—are disposed to question his intentions, or to deny him the merit of patriotic motives. The Government here has been, and still is, strongly inclined to give the most favorable interpretation to his conduct that the circumstances will permit; but in view of the difficulties of restraining his irregular action by orders at so great a distance, the embarrassments his course has already produced, and, if continued in his present position, will be likely to produce, it has been constrained, from high considerations of duty, and a perced regard to the public interest, to remove him from the command of the Western Division, and to order him to repair forthwith to Washington. Considering his extraordinary course, and the mischiet has already produced, his best friends will, we rust, be convinced that no milder course could haveen pursue at owards him."

It is tolerably clear from the tone of the passage

General Gaines lacked not able and eloquent de-ienders in the Senate of the United States. Not one of the members of that body undertook to ad-minister a paticle of that reproof, of which the Union

The proceedings in the United State SENATE. on the 5th, were of profound interest. After passing by a vote of 21 to 15, the bill granting alternate sections of public land for the improvement of Pear River, the Senate took up the resolution offered by Mr. Cass, cailing for the orders of General Gains

Mr. Case, calling for the orders of General Gaines to raising trops, and desiring to know whether they nad been approved by the Executive, or not increasing debate followed.

Mr. Case, said that he entertained a very high results for the case of spect for General Gaines. He was a brave, valuable and patriotic officer, and had rendered good service to the country. But he had passed by the President or the one side, and General Taylor on the other, and canes; but the inquiry he had made was necessary and due to the Government and to the Army. He had called out troops upon his own responsibility and without authority of law and in violation of the Constitution of the United States. These 12,000 nen had part of them been summoned into service,

Mr. Webster, said that General Gaines had bee Mr. Webster, and that General Gaines had been authority for some time in the Southern Division and it could hardly be supposed that he was so ignor ant of the Laws and Constitution as to order out the like the States in violation of law. If he ha tone so, it was certainly a most extraordinary pro-ceding, and called for inquiry.

He believed that the President had power to cal-out the Militia of the States to repel invasion. It was very proper power delegated to the President, and t was his province to exercise this power according o his discretion. He presumed, too, that he had a light to delegate this power for the selection of an right to delegate time power for the selection of an officer of the Army. He desired to know the facts in the case. The proceeding, to say the least of it, was extraordinary, and without censuring the Executive he desired the information which had been ralled for.

Mr. Webster said that he had taken occasion Mr. Webster said that he had taken occasion to inquire of those who had a knowledge of the facts or ought to have a knowledge of the facts, and was informed that the expenses of the Military Department of the Government were now carried on at an expense of nearly half a million a day.

Mr. Sevier, was opposed to the indirect censure implied in the resolution. He defended General Gaines, who, he declared, had acted properly and deserved well of the country. He had not waited for the tedious forms of law but had met the crisis, and met it like a man.

side, and observed that the conduct of General Gaines had been approved by the Governor of Louisi-ana, and the people of New Orleans. He (Mr. J.) rould vote for no resolution implying censure on the officer.

Mr. Westcott, would likewise vote against the r solution. It conveyed a censure upon General Gainer whether intended or not. When the Senator from lichigan was Secretary of War, General Gaine acted precisely as he has since done. He ordered out volunteers from Louisiana immediately after Dade's massacre, and this old veteran with his knapsack on his back marched at the head of those men and led his back marched at the head of those men and led them for seventy miles on foot against the Indians. He thought that General Gaines would have been censured by many in this country if he had not done precisely what had been done by him.

The discussion was further continued at great length by Messrs. Johnson, of Maryland, Mangum, Archer, Bagby, Sevier, Houston and others. Mr. Calboun, moved to lay the resolution on the table: lost—11 to 36. The resolution was finally adopted in a greatly enlarged form, calling likewise for copies of the correspondence between General Scott and General Taylor, and for the copies of the orders given to General Gaines, &c.

It is sent that the Mexican army has orders to retreat upon the Tampico. At the last accounts that port was not blockaded, though the American stoop of

He arrived at the nouse of a Ranchero in great haste and trepidation, and implored him to cross him over the river before these shouring their fore those shouting devils, the Americans, could over take him. The creat-fallen, terror-stricken hero was ferried across, but no sooner had he reached the Mexican side, and placed the broad river between himself and his pursuers, that he strutted about like a barryard turkeycock, and ordered his preserver to play leads in a decease to his home.

Arista's retreat will doubtless continue to the mountains. After losing the day with five to one at Palo Alto and Resaca de la Paima, it is not likely that he will make another stand on the plains. Gen. Taylor takes the field with so overwheiming a force, and so admirably equipped in that terrible arm, the light artitlery, that it would be madines in the enemy to fight again, where defeat would be certain and retreat impossible. Monterey is the first position of any natural strength, and it also commands the entrance of the mountain pass to Saltillo. It is there, in all probability, that Arista will make has great effort, which the importance of the object, his wounded pride, and the advantages of the ground, will all conspire to make a brilliant but bloody day in the history of this warr.

GREAT MENTING IN MOBILE.—An immense meeting was held in Mobile on Thursday night, for the purpose of giving expression to the feelings of the community at the supercession of Gen. GAIRES. Gov. Gayle presided as chairman. A peries of resolutions was adopted, which speak of the veteran and his acts with the utmost warmath of praise and enthusiasm, and condemn the conduct of the government towards him "as most unjust and injurious". The Boston Courser learns from "good authority, that Edward Webster, youngest son of the Senator from Massachuseits, arrived in this city yeaserday, for the purpose of raising a company, to form part of the regiment called for by the Preciamation of His Excellency Governor Briggs. He takes this step in compliance with the suggestions of his desirguished father, who has given the service of a whole life to his country, and is desirous that his children should manifest a readiness to do the same in the manner which occasion requires."
