FIVE DAYS LATER!

☞ The Mobile mail brought us Charleston papers to the 11th instant, which contain European news five days later than those published yesterday. The following is extracted from Mercury:

CHARLESTON, November 11.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

By the ship Mary & Susan, Capt. Chandler, cleared yesterday from Liverpool, files of English papers to the 14th of October are before us, being five days later than our last accounts by way of New-York. They contain nothing further of any very great moment than has already been laid before our readers. So various and so important however, are the events which crowd the present times, that we will proceed to present what we can, to furnish a connected narrative of events in the more distinguished scenes of political change. We first turn to France.

Things wear the appearance of greater stability. The debate on the conduct of Ministers and their justification has produced a powerful effect upon the public mind. All men of influence and property, with the exception of certain concealed Royalists have come out in support of the new order of things.

The most important measure which has been resolved upon in France, is the addition of 100,000 men to the regular army, in consequence it is believed, of the heavy losses occasioned by the African expedition and the dissolution of the Royal Guard.

The professions of the Court of France towards Belgium, are those of neutrality; but how far the other powers of Europe may abstain from interference of some kind or other is yet problematical.——The only point on which foreign powers could fix as the basis of their intervention would be, that proposed by the Belgians themselves at the outset, a distinct administration for Belgium and Holland under the same crown. But whether the Belgians can now be brought to this, is very doubtful. They seem animated by one spirit, and struggling not so much for a separate administration, as for independence. Notwithstanding, however these circumstances, added to the excitement that prevails among a portion of her operatives against machinery, there is much less anxiety in France than might be expected, and there is no doubt but that she will safely weather the storm, and accomplish a peaceable and happy settlement of all her public affairs.

A discussion of two days continuance in the Chamber, on a petition that the ashes of Napoleon should be removed from St. Helena and buried in France, was rejected without a division. Gen. Lamarque and other friends of the deceased Emperor, opposed the project.

A very interesting document appears in the Paris papers. It is the report of M. Berenger, on the proposition to abolish the Punishment of Death. It treats the subject at considerable length and with much ability. The report, after a brief history of the various views which have led to the punishment of death, comes at least to the question of its utility. "Is the infliction of death useful? Does it offer to society such advantages that no other punishment is preferable to it? How does it act on the public mind?"

According to a letter from Madrid of the 30th Sept. the King of Spain has exiled five of the principal Chiefs of the Apostolic party. Among them is Father Cirillo. This measure is said to have been adopted in consequence of the troubles which took place in Madrid on the 27th September.

The independence of Belgium has been declared by the Provisional Government, a project of a Constitution is preparing, and a national Congress is about to be assembled to accept or modify the Constitution to be submitted to it.

The Dutch are every where withdrawing from Belgium. According to the accounts of the Dutch themselves, Antwerp cannot be much longer retained by them.

A paper published at the Hague, speaks of the urgency of preparing the means of defending their own territory; and truly, they say it is time. "Let the Belgians (they say) be told: Every people has a right to declare what are its duties, its rights, and its interests. By your conduct and your attitude you form another nation than ours and that you no longer wish to be in common with us. Be it so! We have neither the right nor the will to subjugate you. Our social union was operated by circumstance, independent of our mutual wishes. The Dutch announce to the Belgians that the separation takes place in the most absolute sense; that there shall be no longer any relation between the two nations, excepting those which shall be afterwards established by treaties between power and power; that there shall be no longer any community of dynasty."

LONDON, Oct. 12.

We received last night, Hamburgh papers to the 9th October, from which we make the following extracts:—

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—Count Appony, our Ambassador at Paris, is to be recalled, and to have high office in the Imperial Household. It is said that he will be succeeded at Paris by Count Frietschmont, who is at present on an extraordinary mission at St. Petersburg. Marshal Mortier, is to be the new French Ambassador to St. Petersburgh, and Marshal Maison, to Vienna. The report of a Congress to be held at Troppau, gains ground.

The whole of the Imperial Family, except the Archduke Francis Charles and his consort, is now at Presburgh, to which city a great part of the most distinguished inhabitants of this capital, is gone, to be present at the Coronation of the Crown Prince as King of Hungary. The magnificence displayed on this occasion, both by our Court and the Hungarian Magnates, is said to exceed every thing before seen; 22,008 pieces of silver and 6,000 of gold coin, have been made expressly to scatter among the people The young King of Hungary is to make his solemn entry into this city on Monday next.

VIENNA, Sept. 30.

The report of a Congress to be held at Troppau, gains more credit, and to-day it is even said that his Majesty the Emperor, will set out from St. Petersburg for that place, on Saturday next.

A Courier was suddenly despatched to-day to Turin.

FROM BRANDENBURG, Oct. 4.—The unfavorable accounts of the progress of the insurgents in Belgium excite the greatest anxiety, and it is more than ever believed that the European powers will interfere. A partial intervention of a single power is, however, the less probable in this case, as occasion might thereby be given to France to intervene in a contrary spirit. It is said that this matter was brought under discussion while Count Laban, the French Ambassador Extraordinary was here. It is said to have been expressly required by the said Allied Powers, as a condition of their recognition of the new Dynasty of France, that the latter should not interfere in the affairs of the Netherlands, Spain, and Portugal. The French Government is said to have acceded to this condition, but requiring that similar assurances of non intervention be assumed as a principal. People are confident than ever that England, which is so interested in preserving the integrity of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, will speedily take a decisive step.

BRUNSWICK, October 6.

The third and last sitting of the Estates of Brunswick, Wolfenbuttel and Blankenburg, is resolved to send Count Von Oberg, of Dutch, with a suitable Address to his Majesty of England.

All patriots ardently hope that Prince William may convoke, as soon as convenient, a General Assembly of the States, which may discuss the means of removing the great grievances under which the country still labours. There can be no doubt of the willingness of the Duke of Brunswick Oels to contribute all in his power, but to attain the object it is absolutely necessary that tranquility, order, and security, which are now happily restored, should be preserved.

HARLINGEN, October 8.—The Bours Van Amsterdam, steam boat, which has arrived at Lubec from Cronstadt, has not brought any Russian letters or journals.

VIENNA, Oct. 1.—The Coronation at Presburgh took place on the 28th.

BY THE LAST ARRIVALS AT NEW-YORK.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 20.—The army in its retreat carried fire and pillage in every quarter, lamenting the unfortunate peasants hidden in their caves.

The town of Ath, an important fortress, has been in possession of the Patriots since yesterday.

At the moment of writing (9 in the morning) eight pieces of cannon and a howitzer, with munitions are entering the town by the gate of Anderloch. The commissioners who serve these pieces, and who are of the garrison of Ath, enter with them with matches lighted, and commanded by a Major of artillery. They bring with them 40,000 cartridges and 200 barrels of powder.—The people display the most lively enthusiasm.

The people of Ath have made a prisoner of the Dutch General, who arrived yesterday to put the town in a state of siege; as well as a captain of artillery, who was found in the garrison. The General will not be released until M. de Spitzis de Grammont shall have been released.

Ath will be our Iprielle—our Cassarille are fit to be guess. All the English who, on the faith of a promise of their Ambassador, Lord Bagot, remained at Brussels, and were witnesses and victims of the Dutch soldiery, have united to address their complaints immediately to their government, and denounce to it the most infamous violation of all the principle of the rights of nations and the laws of humanity.

An inhabitant of Liege who arrived this evening within our walls, announces in the most positive manner, that the citadel surrounded to the Bourgeois during the day of Wednesday last. Louvain is entirely relieved of the enemy. M. Meenen who arrived this morning, assures us of that fact.

More than 20,000 citizens are forming a Burgeois army, among many of whom are our brave wounded were seen throughout his rout, by M. Potter who arrived here yesterday.

Nothing was heard but cries of Vive de Potter! long live the brave defenders of our liberty! long live the Belgians! death to the Hollanders! death to the assassins of our wives and children! On descending from his carriage he was borne along by more than 10,000 persons present, and with great difficulty entered the town house. There he was received by the members of the provisional government, who flung themselves upon him, and almost smothered him with embraces.

The people assembled before the Amigo and demanded him to the balcony. Mr. Potter presented himself accompanied by M. d'Hoogvorst. He thanked his brave fellow citizens for the truly noble reception they had given him and swore that thenceforward he was wholly theirs, and no pains should be spared to aid them in throwing off the yoke of the infamous Hollanders.

Brussels will long remember this day.

The quarters which surround the park are all more or less injured: those of the street Louvain present the appearance of complete devastation, its inhabitants were chased by the Hollanders, and are for the most part ruined. Let us hope that the country will not abandon those who have suffered for her.

There is nothing new from Prussia, nor about the entry of the Prussians into Maestricht.

EXPEDITION TO ALGIERS.

MARSEILLES, 24th Sept.—(Camp near Algiers, 15th September.)—Our army has greatly changed its appearance since the arrival of General Clauzel: it has recovered all its vigor, and the moral which it had almost lost entirely during the last days of the former commander; which to occupy their minds, and doubtless to shun the the too prompt declaration of the troops for the new order of things, made us believe by false despatches, invented at pleasure, that the Kabyles were about to attack us at various points. It would seem as if they had all been drawn off by him.

Confidence returned to our soldiers and to the inhabitants, who arrive every day in great numbers, bringing us provisions, and putting themselves often at night under the protection of our advanced posts, waiting for day to enter the town. We are forming at this moment, a corps of 15,000 to 18,000 Arabs or Moors, who are to have the same pay as ourselves, and to whom the oath of fidelity to the French, will be taken on the Alcoran. This corps will serve in our advanced posts, and protect the Bedouins who bring provisions to Algiers. Many officers have been promoted.

SPAIN.—Accounts from Madrid are to 13th September.—The King was about addressing a proclamation to his subjects, begging them not to listen to a few ambitious men who wish to overthrow religion and his dynasty. He tells of the constant wishes entertained by him for the happiness of the nation as expressed in his royal decree of 4th May, 1814, on his return from his captivity in France, in his act of 6th March, 1820, the evening of the day when he was constrained to swear to the Constitution, and in his proclamation, and in his proclamation of 30th September, 1823, on the sortie of Cadiz. The King adds that if he has not yet given to his people institutions according to their wants, it was not that he wanted the will, but to the difficult circumstances which had occurred, and which happily for Spain, had terminated advantageously for the throne. He continues by saying that he shall by advice of his allies convoke the people by their Representatives, that he may make known to them the institutions which the Crown shall judge proper to grant to its subjects.

This it is said will be preceded by a total change of a ministry called generally the decrepid. This has been determined on with great reserve, and will cut short the embarassment of all those who see in this measure the infallible loss of their powers and places. His majesty will authorise the chief places in the Provinces to address to the Government the petitions which they think may tend to the welfare of the monarchy, that is to say the right of petition shall be exercised by these corporations only. It is said that in this royal proclamation, the subject of the American Republics will be lightly touched. His majesty would have it understood, that before taking any definitive step, he desires to know the wishes of the Representatives in this respect. All this announces that affairs are pressing, and that the blow must be partiel; for half measures can no longer calm irritated spirits. A circumstance which has probably hastened this revolution is, that the Sovereign has received a letter from his aunt, the Queen of France, conceived in the most tender and affectionate terms, in which he is advised through her niece, the Queen of Spain, to take a wise part and to give institutions in conformity to the wants and wishes of Spain.

Daily Mail.—The citizens of Mobile and of New-Orleans memorialized, five or six months ago, for a daily, or at least a three a week, mail. This application was refused by the Post-Office Department, on the ground of expensiveness, and the weight of its existing burdens. It was stated by Mr. Barry, that the Department was already under obligations for disbursements $100,000 greater than its receipts. By the great saving in the conclusion of the late contracts at Washington this objection has been obviated; and we may reasonably look for an early mail

COMMERCIAL.

Extracts of letters received in Charleston, dated

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 12.

5 o'Clock, P. M.—There is not so good an opinion affect, about cotton, and many hitherto the most sanguine begin to despond, and say prices will be lower.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 12.

Annexed we hand our circular of the 9th inst. There was rather more demand for cotton yesterday, and about 2,500 bales sold; but to day the demand has been quite limited and the market flat. About 1500 bales of Sea Island, are to be offered by auction on the 15th inst. and there is no saying [illegible] doing in that description by private.

Extract from the circular dated Oct. 9.

Our last circular was under date of 25th ult in which day we had a revival in the demand for Cotton, which continued brisk for several subsequent days, and a large business was done at an advance of ¼ per lb; but the briskness of the demand subsided on the 29 ult, and this improvement has been lost, as we have since had a languid market. This change of feeling is attributed in a great measure to the increased pol'tical excitement on the continent, where is felt in the export trade. The sales of the week ended on the 1st inst. were 24,500 bales. On the 2d inst. ab ut 2,500 bales sold, but since then the transactions have not amounted to 1,000 bales per day. The sales of Sea Islands are firm, but the demand continues limited. The import of cotton into Liverpool for the last nine months is 675,000 bales against 595,000 to the 1st of October last year. The increase in the supply from the United states is 168,000 bales.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 9.

The cotton market has this week been dull, and prices are rather low, particularly for superior descriptions of Uplands, Alabamas &c.—The sales are 8,500 5 bls one half of which are Uplands and 2000 of these are to be on speculation on American account. The consumption continues unabated, but the Spinners and dealers are deterred from making heavy purchases by the unsettled state of the continent, for though the intercourse may not be interrupted, yet confidence in commercial matters is a good deal shaken, and as it may be supposed that the same feeling will extend generally. Some calculate that our early import of cotton will be greater than they would have been, had the political state of other countries admitted shipments to be made to them with equal security. How this consideration may operate in America, you will have the best opportunity of judging. I cannot think that high prices will rule here under any circumstances short of actual scarcity; still I consider trade in this country to be in so sound a state, as to cause an expectation that the present rates will be maintained without material alteration, and it is not unlikely but early imports to meet them will be found to answer.

Uplands, 6¼ to 7¼d; Sea Islands 12½ to 16 and 20½; Orleans 6¾ to 8d; Alabama 6¼ a 7¼d.

OCT. 12.—The business in cotton continues limited at previous rates.
