It is basely necessary terremind the patrons of the drams that Old Gray takes his benefit, his farewell for the season, this evening. He has been a sufferer by the removal of the deposites, and calls upon his friends to relieve his distress. To suppose that the appeal will be in vain, would be to suppose, as Old Gray himself haquit, a positive abjurdity. The bill of fare is quite inviting; a new farce called the Miniature, written by a goutleman of this city, in to be performed togother with Morton's excellent comedy, "A cure for the Theipublic for well awars that the Louisiana since it has been under a certain malign influence, has been advocating the pre-tensions of Edward D. White by the constant repetition of the most state and unfounded calumnies against his competitor. We in vain endeavored to argue upon the relation of the most state and unfounded calumnies against his competitor. We in vain endeavored to argue upon the relations of Mr. Leigh's set speech, and the suriliary declaration of the two gentlemen, and to show by calm and depasted the superiority. We were met alone by assertions, and server the superiority. We were met alone by assertions, and server the superiority. We were met alone by assertions, and the undeubted hight, for the proof to establish them. We shall not here dwell upon the absurdity of sustaining the Campo of a cardidate as has been done in this case by a tempting to show those of his fival to be unworthy of the public on show that it is consideration; but shall merely remark an passent that it cannot have much wisely, for admitting the undittees of Julice Dawson to be fully established, how can that elevate the pre-tensions of Mr. White or show that he is competent to fill the gubernaterial chair. The Louisiana has bent its only received to file labora. It windly imagines that its only necessary to blast Judge Dawson's character to secure the election of Mr. White. Now, sir, you have the head and front of my offending. If I have, by making Mr Wood known to you, innocently done you an injury, I shall often remember it with sincere regret. It never was intended that we should wear a stranger in our basem up in a mere letter of introduction—consequently, I did look forward to this cause of complaint. I do not attempt to, justify Mr Wood, for I new believe him to be a dangerous acquaistance. Still I think you illiheral in endeavoring to represent my conduct toward you as reprehensible. It is idlean hadd no accountable for that letter. I justify myself by Mr Wood's conduct here, and my letter to Mr Carleton and others. Mr Carleton and his lady, at his own table, secommonded him to me in the strongest terms. I have soon your notice of my letter in your paper. Yours, JOHNR. DAWSON.

Test this is the evidence, to support the confident language of the Advertiser that "nails every count that has ever been written against Judge Bawson at his door." What because Judge Dawson has recommended an undeserving man, is that conclusive proof that he himself is unfit, incupable or unwerthy, or does it show that he is guilty of any of the offences charged against him. It would be an insu to any man to suppose that he could consciontionally an ower the a questions in the affirmative. Not Judge Dawson has done no more than has been done and will be done by thousands and thousands of high-minded and honorable Young Rapid, individuals, acting under the same misapprehensions which Miss Vertex it appears he did as to the real character of the person for when he bespoke a good character, and mone but a partican or one with a very little mind, such so we are corry to fin in the editor of the Louisiana, would set it up as a disease lying consideration to the public regard. If this be all that the Sying consideration to the public regard. If the be all the set that a possess of Judge Dewson sin argue against his plains, or his qualities as a mean or a citizen, we feel pity at their means and senset hat consent hat c to heing a life sò unexceptionable in ing worse for animadversion.

It is well known to this community that Mr. P. M. Wood, vices reputation has been so freely spoken of by the editor of the Louisians, made his debut in this city under the suspices of Mr. Gibson the then proprieter of the Argus. The latter gentleman may now pretend that he did not know the character of Wood while in his employ. This we can show is not the case. He was retained in that comblishment after the latter from Mr. Cruswell had been published in the columns of the Mercaptile Advertiser, and left it of his even sceord for a situation in the office of the Courier, where he was more regularly if not better paid. It is therefore obvious that Mr. Gibson is not entitled to the profise which he would here appropriate to himself, and the the consumer he passes on the gentlemen who recommended Wood to Dawson are equally applicable to himself for heading that i dividual in his employ after he became cugnissed of the villanies which he now lays before the public to subserve his own purposes. We know the motive that principled Mr. G been to be so servers upon Wund, who, although deserving of all that it is said against him, to now must probably to the secret service of the persons who control the Comstant and Mercantile Advertisers. It is to divert attention them still in the employ of our contemp wary of the Merchant's News. It cannot be that he is ignorant of what is a matter of public notoriety, and of the suspension that are entertain. d that the reviled Wood has become sub-was his endabates n another print.
