> Emigration.—Mr. Buchanan, in his letter on Emigration to Mr. Wilmot Horton, says—"I compute, that since the independence of the United States of America, not less than one million and a half of persons have emigrated from the United Kingdom to the North American Continent:—of which 256, 000 have gone from England, 250,000 from Scotland, and one million, at lest from Ireland—five sixths being from the Province of Ulster, a circumstance chiefly attributable to the comparative degree of comfort the peasants of the North of Ireland enjoy over the other, not so fortunate, portion of the Kingdom. Since 1815, the year in which emigration began to find its way towards our own provinces—the total number of Emigrants from the United Kingdom has been 250,000, of which 300,000 went from Ireland. From the port of Londonderry alone, which is the chief outlet from the counties of Tyrone, Fermanagh, Donegal, and Derry, 38,000 went, say 30,000 to the British Colonies, 8000 to the United States, and seventeen individuals to the Cape of Good Hope. Last year, the total emigration from the United Kingdom a mounted to 40,000; of which 22,000 went to the British Provinces of North America; and out of that number 16, 862 arrived at the port of Quebec."

American Packet-Ships .- Last week it fell to our lot to record an instance of astonishingly quick sailing on the part of the ship Salem, Capt. Edw. Richardson, which sailed from this port on the 20th Feb. and arrived at New-York on the 14th March, having made her passage in the very short space of 22 days .- This week it affords us no less pleasure to mention that the packet shid Birmingham, Captain Harris, and the new ship St. George, Capt. Taubman, sailed from New-York on the 25th ultimo-the former, cotton laden, arrived here on the night of Monday last, and the latter, bringing a cargo of Indian corn, was off the port on Tuesday night; having made their respective passages in 20 and 21 days. The St. George, which arrived vesterday, combines every excellence which can recommend her to the favourable notice of both shippers and passengers.
