THE WHY AND WHEREFORE.

The Lincoln administration continually says that the South is fighting to keep slaves in their homes, and that our soldiers in the field of battle are fighting to free them. The resolutions of the South are almost entirely aimed, for except in the case of very low class slaves, they have over and again read in Southern prints and heard from Southerners high the true spirit of our struggle—“We are not here to free the slaves.” The North is the seat of real government. That right had been greatly impaired and curtailed while we remained within the Union by the constantly increasing numerical strength of the North. The South is too confident that the Northern leaders, had they not been swayed by the influence of the slaves, would have done all that was possible during the present war.

Franklin, December 3.—Sunday last 150 sick soldiers arrived at the hospital on the way to the camp and hospital.

The Washington Star of the 4th instant gave a full account of what the English capital is doing to help the slaves.

Much feeling is manifested about Powell, of Kentucky, and Bright, of Tennessee. It is desired, that he be removed from the command of the army, and that he be exchanged for another.

He is the principal author of the movement of the slaves in the South.

The correspondence of the Peabody, is reported, that Gen. Fremont claims a seat in the Senate, as soon as Kansas.

The following is the report of Capt. Myers, of the break between the Oregon and Pacific and a three-months' prologue, in the sound:

C. S. GOVERNOR. December 8.

Major Gen. L. M. Cushing, Commanding Department of Oregon.

General—While at Astoria's wharf, Portland City, at about 1 P. M. yesterday, I received a telegram from Capt. J. C. Frémont, commanding, in and notified me that the enemy were approaching, and to prepare for an attack on the Columbia River. A small force could hardly be distinguished at a mile's distance.

At 1 P. M. the enemy approached the river, and the enemy was upon the opposite bank.
