THE MAIL field yesterday from beyond Montgomery.

ELECTIONS.—The only state elections which occur this month are those of Vermont and Maine. The first takes place to-day, and is for Governor, four members of Congress and the State Legislature. The second is held this day week, and is likewise for Governor, six members of Congress and the Legislature. In Vermont, the whigs will probably carry their candidate for Governor, John Mattocks, late member of Congress. They may be reasonably expected to succeed in two or three out of the four Congressional districts, and to elect a majority of the Legislature. In Maine, the locofocos will have it all their own way. Edward Robinson is the whig candidate for Governor, but he has no chance—The last Legislature carved out the Congressional districts to suit themselves. They, like their political brethren in Ohio North Carolina, and other States, piled up some 3,500 whig majority in one district; and distributed the locofoco majorities so nicely among the remaining five, as to render probable their success in all save the strong Kennebec district. The Legislature, too, will doubtless be locofoco, Maine is one of those States which the whigs can only hope to carry once in eight or ten years.

In October there are several important elections.—Maryland chooses a State Legislature on the first Tuesday. The contest in this State will doubtless be sharp, as upon the result will depend the choice of a U. S. Senator. The last Legislature being whig in one branch and locofoco in another, failed to agree upon a plan of districting the State. There is consequently no election this year for members of Congress. The duty of laying off the State into districts will devolve upon the Legislature to be elected in October. The election in Michigan for Congress and the Legislature is held the same day. We know but little of the progress of the canvass, which seems spiritless enough.

On the second Tuesday in October, Georgia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Ohio, hold their elections—In Georgia, the people are called upon to elect a Governor, two members of Congress, (to fill vacancies,) and a State Legislature. There are circumstances connected with the contest which will render it replete with interest. On the one hand, the locofocos in solemn State Convention nominated Mr. Calhoun for President, and Mr. Cobden, a renegade whig, for Governor. Those nominations were not effected without having but fruitless opposition. The whigs assert that they are peculiarly distasteful to the old Union party, which constitute the nucleus of locofocoism in that State, and that many members of that party will refuse to support the ticket. On the other hand, the whigs have with equal solemnity and far more unanimity, nominated Henry Clay for President, and Geo. W. Crawford for Governor. To the latter nomination no particular exception is made, but in regard to that of Mr. Clay, the locofocos affirm that many of the old State Rights party, who compose a vast majority of the whigs of Georgia, are dissatisfied, and will not support the ticket. It is therefore seen that dissentions are declared to exist in the ranks of both parties. How this much we know: that the nomination of Mr. Clay was carried in the State Convention, very nearly by acclamation—there being not more than two or three out of nearly two hundred votes against it. That of Mr. Calhoun was vehemently opposed by forty members of the locofoco party. Our readers may, therefore, infer which of the two nominations is most generally acceptable to the party by whose representatives it has been made. It is very certain that the old Union men, the veterans of locofocoism in Georgia, have been greatly neglected by the expounders of new tests, who have but recently affiliated with them. The former have been compelled both in the nomination for President and that for Governor. How far the germs of discontent thus strewn in their midst will affect the result remains to be seen.

Ohio and Pennsylvania have been woefully gerrymandered, that if we elect seven members of Congress in one and nine or ten in the other State, we shall achieve a substantial triumph. In Ohio, we may carry the Legislature. New Jersey will probably go for the whigs.

CHURCHWARDENS' ELECTION.

Yellow Fever patients remaining in Hospital, 42.

TO THE EDITORS OF THE BEE.

Gentlemen,—

For the information of the public, I give below a statement of the Boston and Discharges of Yellow Fever Patients, furnished by the attending physicians of the Hospital, according to law, for the month of August 1843:—

Deaths by Yellow Fever,	90
Discharged, "	72

The number now under treatment in the Hospital, as given by the attending physicians, is 46. These make in all 208, which exceed the number of reported cases of yellow fever by 30, the whole number reported for the month being only 178.

G. M. SAUNDERS,
Clerk Charity Hospital.

☞ Last evening a white man was arrested in Customhouse street, who had given pieces to two negroes without having any authority therefor. The two negroes were also arrested.

☞ The Grand Jury, at its last sitting, ignored the indictment against J. Fleming, accused of an attempt to commit a rape.

Counterfeit $5 bills of the Commercial Bank of Macon, Ga., are in circulation in Columbus. Some of them may find their way hither.

☞ It appears from an article in the Hartford Courier, that the fraequenters of the drama are in the habit of smoking in the Theatre. This is a refinement of luxury which we Americans have not yet attained.

Relics.—A Paris paper relates that in a collection of autographs of celebrities, which was sold in the year 1841, there was a copy of six pages quarto of a letter written by Martin Luther to the Elector John, and dated July 9th, 1530. This letter was bought for 980 francs by the Grand Duke of Lucca. A letter from Scandenbeg, written with his blood in his prison at Dresden, was also purchased by the Grand Duke for 50 florins.

Rich.—The Boston Post, Chronicle of Saturday says:—Just as our paper is going to press we are blessed with such a pleasant shower of rain which we think will prove to be of great value to the cotton planters, as well as to the health of the surrounding country, which we regret to say is still unhealthy, though the distance from the city shows gradual improvement. We hope by our next number to be able to announce the entire disappearance, from our precincts, of every trace of the pestilential disease.

A French Bathing Place.—How there is a charming bay, shut in by towering rocks, and sheltered from the heavy waves that roll upon the shore exposed parts of the coast,

quibus omnis ab alto
Frangitur, inque sinus scindit sese unda reductos.

The wand is as clear as the brightest crystal, and through its azure depths the eye can discern the white sand that sparkles at the bottom. This constitutes the famous bathing place, and here the best months of the year are to be seen, during the heat of the morning, executing their watery purposes; beaux and belles alike, sporting and flirting as though the sea were their native element. The ladies are dressed in their chastest fleece garments, with gigantic hats of straw, as a protection from the sun's rays. They are kept in a buoyant position by bladders passed under their arms, while expert bathing-men push them over into the bay, by holding their feet with one hand and swimming with the other. I fancy your astonishment at this description; but, I assure you, it is nothing to the grotesque than was mine on my first introduction to this singular scene. It is upon such occasions that we feel we are among another people, differing essentially from us, both in habits and sentiment. The day upon which I witnessed this scene, was brilliant in the extreme, and as nothing so justly excites, therefore, as you will readily believe, I made a point of joining this amphibious party. Having entered a youth that the ladies were all stripping myself preparatory for the plunge, I was startled by a fat Frenchman, who occupied the entire attention of the assistant by fitting on different dresses, many of which were split by his exaggerated proportions, the course of half an hour terminating in having shed my outer garments, I was arrayed in the regular aquatic dress, "if dress it might be called, that dress had none." The neither robe did scarcely reach the knees, while the jacket, computed of the thinnest muslin rivals, was wholly guiltless of the sleeves. To confess the truth, I certainly did feel somewhat awkward at the idea of thus walking down to the sands, through a party of ladies sitting at work; but custom is a great reconciling shed my outer garments, I was arrayed in the regular aquatic dress, "if dress it might be called, that dress had none." The neither robe did scarcely reach the knees, while the jacket, computed of the thinnest muslin rivals, was wholly guiltless of the sleeves. To confess the truth, I certainly did feel somewhat awkward at the idea of thus walking down to the sands, through a party of ladies sitting at work; but custom is a great reconciling agent, and I soon found myself in the water and its midst of Neptune with the most perfect nonchalance. I was much amused at perceiving these fair tenants of the sea, as they floated and gambolled, acknowledging their universal acquaintance with an occasional nod and courtesy as they might have shown in the gardens of the Tuileries.—Paris's Letters of the Pyrenees.

An Unexpected and Painful Death.—A young man named Robert Twigg, died yesterday morning under circumstances of a painful nature, and which should prove a caution to others. His residence was in North Carre street, near Columbia. On Monday he skinned a cow, which it is now supposed died from the effects of poison. He had at the time a slight sore on his hand. On Tuesday the hand became inflamed, and his arm swelled to an enormous extent, with excessive pain. In this condition, suffering extreme agony, he labored until yesterday morning, when he died. Dr. Smith was in attendance, but from the nature of the malady, and as this would not be concealed to. Various parts of the body of the deceased exhibit the effects of a poisonous concoction.—Baltimore Sun.

SPECIFIC AGAINST YELLOW FEVER.

NO physician doubts at present that there is but one sort of sickness deemed essential for the safety of the public interment to those cases called pestilential, the yellow fever and the plague; they are marked by the same train of symptoms, the digestive organs, with all their complications and ramifications which for a long time have baffled their rare character, until presented them as a group of pestilential cases, which have been found to be the result of no slights of those who had the misfortune of catching the infection, and now that their nature, their cause, their origin are in a better known, and therefore the proper regimen of their victims. I will not attempt a further description of those diseases, but two years experience constantly crowned with success, having convinced me of the efficacy of the specific against yellow fever, I offer it to the public from the implicit confidence of its superiority over any other cure or nostrum.

DOCTOR MARCHAND'S office is in Bourbon street, corner of St. Louis. He will be from day-light 'till sunset, and from 11 to 2. He will also attend to the cure of secret diseases in all their degrees. He treats one and all with the same attention. He insures the health of those of the Parisons, without surgical operation or pain.
