A singular Sermon, delivered at Frankford, (Tenn) by James Simpson, a few months before his death. What I am now going to relate, is but a simple story, and it is probable some of you may have heard me tell it before; but it has taken such possession of my mind, that I thought I would just drop it for your consideration. When I was a young man, there lived in our neighborboud a Presbyterian, who was universally re-ported to be a very liberal man, and uncommony upright in his dealings. When he had any if the produce of his farm to dispose of, he made it an invariable rule to give good measure, over good, rather more than could be required of him. One of his friends observing his frequently doing so, questioned him why he did it told him he gare too much, and said it could and had I time I would comment upon it, though not be to his advantage. Now, my friends, mark the answer of this good Presbyterian:-"God Almighty has permitted me but one journey through the world, when gone. I cannot re-turn to rectify mistakes." Think of this, friends: but one journey through the world—the hours that are past, are gone foreyer; and the actions in those hours are never to be recalled. I do not
