It is such enterprises as these, vast indeed in their conception and their results, but practicable at a cost of little moment, which solicit the government of the union in its wide domain. To our apprehension, the application of the national wealth to objects so obviousby national, is of matter of more worthy ambition than the pattry praise of paying off some few millions of debt by a given month, -within this or that president's particular term. Prosperity is as desirable as desirable as defence: we wisely spent millions for the latter; and a few would not be unwisely expended in promoting the former.

A morning and an evening paper having published demi omicially the resolutions adopted by the meeting of citizens which assembled at the Exchange on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of expressing their disapprobation of the spirit of nullification and disunson, and of memorial rzing congress to adjust, at its present session, the subject of the tariff," (we quote verbatim the notice,) in justice to those who projected it, we publish the resolutions introduced by Mr MAYBIN, which, we understand, were submitted to those who signed the call. 2d. Resolved, That whenever a system of policey which has been for a series of years pursued by the general government, has called forth decided and re-Med complaints from any member of our confederacy. in the same "spirit of mutual deference and concer sion," that system should be thoroughly reviewed-its practical operations more carefully scrutinized-those complaints heard with patience and fraternal kindnessand, if possible, be effectually and permanently remov.

3d. Resolved, That while we advocate the system of protecting done-stic industry, as a wise and constitu-tional policy, we do contestly recommend to congress that the taris haw be adjusted, at its present session, and if prescrible; and that relying on the wisdom and spatriotism of congress for the best means of effecting this most important object, we will guly recommen that the adjustment be conducted in a sincere spirit of compromise and mutual concession.

4 Resolved. That we consider the doctrine of nullification, as it is termed, implying the existence of a right in the legislature of any one state to declare as act of congress unconstitutional and inoperative within its limits, most unsound in principle, wholly incompati hie with the letter and sperit of the constitution and meritably leading to distinion, anarchy and the ruin of our republic; and that we do therefore give it our most unqualified disapprobation.

5 Resolved, That we do most deeply regret the course of opposition to the general government which a portion of our fellow citizens in the State of South Carolina hare for some years man fested, and more particularly in some of their late public proceedings and addresses; yet while we disapprove of their doctrines our confidence in their patriotism and love of the union is undiminished; and that we do entermin a sincere and high respect for that i aportant member of our confed eracy distinguished for her revolutionary sufferings and services, for her long attachment to the union, and for the talents, Attainments and virtues of her citizens; and that as brothren we do most earne tly and most respecfally implore them to desist from a course of proceedings which will endanger our safety, prosperity, and in the que our national existence. 6. Resolved. That the proceedings of this meeting; signed by the president, vice presidents and sacretaries, with a cupy of the notification calling it together, be smitted to the senators of this state, and to the representative of this city in congress, to be by them laid before both houses of congress; and that they be requested to endeavor to effect a speedy settlement of the important subject of the tariff, in the spirit and upon principles embodied in the above resolutions.

DYING IN SLEEP .- The following, from Min Lan don's novel of Romance and Reality, is new and striking: Mr. Arundel (the uncle of heroine) had lain down some time. He was asleep-a calm, heautiful renovating sleep—and Emily sat down by his bad side.
The love which bends over the sleeping is, save in its sorrow, like the love which bends over the dead—so deep, so solemn! Suddently he opened his eyes, but without any thing of the starting return to consciousness with which people generally awake—perhaps her appearance harmonized with his dream. Without speaking, but with a look of extreme fundness, he took
