Friday Morning, June 25, 1887

FRIDAY—We seldom now see any of the old-fashioned gentlemen who were wont to walk in the park, and who would carry a cane, and who would wear a top hat, and who would wear a frock coat, and who would wear a waistcoat, and who would wear a pair of trousers, and who would wear shoes, and who would wear socks, and who would wear gloves, and who would wear finger rings, and who would wear a watch, and who would wear a pocket square, and who would wear a cravat, and who would wear a necktie, and who would wear a pair of gaiters, and who would wear puttees, and who would wear boots, and who would wear spurs, and who would wear saddles, and who would wear bridles, and who would wear whips, and who would wear
