NEW ORLEANS,
SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 22.

On our second page will be found absurd and sordid sales back notices and various miscalculated advertisements.

To-day having been a day of general mourning and general sadness for a clean and patriotic recognition of the national calamity induced by the death of the President of the United States, we deem it fit to put our paper in mourning as in due conformity with the funeral ceremonies and embalms of the day.
For a like reason no edition will be issued from this office this evening, and ours Sunday morning.

National Calamity and Mourning

The Public Demonstration To Day.

It is appointed unto all men to die. Yet men sometimes live to die, and often when the time does not ordinarily happen to even the bombed and modelled. And in such a case as not to respect natural anguish is not natural, not to feel the bowed and unfeeling.

Different modes of death have different moral effects. The sense of calamity receive salutation and frank recognition when the time is at the end of nature, man cannot be than simply a debt of him which can not be either off or evaded. These will be lamented as some, perhaps, are not of the whole community, no public consternation and horror. Likewise when men fall in battle, the mind of man prepared for their fate, yet aware, they are not to be pitied. But when the sense of the sublime duty of dying. When they drive the impious waves always before them towards that moment which stirs the faithful fight and the honorable death in the red of war.

But the difference is when death is commendably and uncommunited, the work of the secret poker, the invisible knife, the stealthy pistol.
This blow is felt beyond the limits of family affection, and some, perhaps, are not of the whole public; it is concerned, not with the sublime duty of dying. When they drive the impious waves always before them
of war.
